Kate goes it alone with new auction company

THE predicted housing market slump has not deterred property specialist Kate Hughes from launching her own independent auction company, Merseyside Property Auctions (MPA).

Former Sutton Kersh senior valuer Kate, 27, was last year nominated for a Woman In Property award after helping achieve record annual auction sales of £37m in Liverpool.

She said: "I believe I can build on my experience and record of achievement to provide a really first-class auction service here at MPA and grow a great new property business in Merseyside.

"When times are hard, people are on the look-out for a bargain, and Merseysiders know a good bargain when they see one."

Kate's office in Prescot Street, Liverpool, has organised her first Merseyside auction for September at the Marriott Hotel, Speke, offering residential and commercial property.
